JOB WORK.
Of every description executed with neatness and dispatch, and on reasonable terms.

HUMOROUS.

A Lazy Case.
"I want to know," bawled out Speargrass, "if that boy hasn't got through them taters yet?"
"Sakes alive!" responded the old woman, "you had better be looking arter that Job z; here it's night, and he hasn't been here a single bucket of them taters from the field this blessed day!"
"T-w bad," said the old man, "I'll be he hasn't dug a bushel of potatoes this day, and I strictly charged him to be s'ry, and dig and carry 'em in ten bushels before sundown, or I'll give him the all-firedest whipping he ever had in his life!"
"With this piece of eloquence burning on his lips, Speargrass took down a water-pail and started for the field. There stood Job z a great colubity of a stub-dile, dole-looking whelp, digging for dear life, as though he was afraid dark would catch him before he got the last potato out of the ground."

"Why on airth," bawled out the old man, "ain't you been and brought in them taters? Where are they? How many have you dug?"
"Well, dad," responded the hopeful, trying to wipe the sweat from his brow, and straightening up his long lazy body perpendicular with the shovel handle, "I have been tuckered away like sin all the afternoon, and—"
"What's the taters?" bawled the old man.
"Well, dad, there's one! I were a snake-in-out after when you come, and as soon as I tip 'em out there, it'll be just three of them!"
Old Speargrass went in "lemons," and the way he let loose with his wattle, and Jabez cut loose for home, was a fine illustration for a comic almanac.

THE REASON WHY "BRUDDER DICKSON" LEFT THE CHURCH.—Mr. Dickson, a colored barber in one of our large New England towns, was shaving one of his customers, when a conversation occurred between them respecting Mr. Dickson's former connection with a colored church in that place.

"I believe you are connected with the church in Elm street, Mr. Dickson," said the customer.
"No, sah, not at all."
"What are you not a member of the African church?"
"Not dis year, sah."
"Why did you leave their communion, Mr. Dickson? if I may be permitted to ask."
"Why, I tell you, sah," said Mr. Dickson, strapping a razor on the palm of his hand, "it was jes like dis—I joined that church in good faith. I gin ten dollars towards de stated preachin' of de gospil de fust year, and de church pepil all call me Brudder Dickson. De second year my business not good, an I gin only five dollars. Dat year, de church pepil call me Mister Dickson. Dish razor hurt you, sah?"

"No, the razor goes tolerable well."
"Well, sah, de third year I feel berry poor—sickness in my family—an I didn't gib nuffin for preachin'. Well, sah, arter dat dey call me ole NIGGER DICKSON, an I leff 'em."

So saying, Mr. Dickson brushed his customer's hair, and the gentleman departed, well satisfied with the reason why Mr. Dickson left his church.

MRS. PARTINGTON ON DISEASES.—"Diseases, is very various," said Mrs. Partington, as she returned from a street door conversation with Dr. Rolds. "The Doctor tells me that poor old Mrs. Haze has got two buckles on her lungs! It is dreadful to think of. I declare. The diseases is so various! one day we hear of people's dying of harrniting of the lungs, another of brown creancures; here they tell us of the elementary canal being out of order, and there about the tenor of the throat; here we hear of the neurology in the head, and there of an embargo; on one side o', we hear of a man being killed by gettin' a pound o' beef in his sarcophagus, and on the other kills himself by discoverin' his jugular vein. Things change so, that I declare I don't know how to subscribe for any disease now-a-days. New names and o'strikes take the place of the old, and I might as well throw my yarb ling away."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Illustrated Family Friend
TEN YEARS; OR, LOVE AND RIVALRY.

The village of Tarentum had suddenly assumed that bustling air, which is a peculiar characteristic of many of the western settlements. The oldest inhabitant by which we are to understand one of five years continuance, had never seen the town in so great a ferment, since the day in which it was laid out and sold in squares and sites to the highest bidder. From that hour, until the season in which our tale commences, Tarentum had, in some measure, shared the deep quiet of the prairie, on whose border it was located. Things now were an entirely different aspect. A frame house was now being erected by the oldest inhabitant, who acted in several capacities of tavern keeper, steam doctor and merchant. In short, he was the factorum of the place, and universally acknowledged mayor-elect of the future city of Tarentum.

Two embarks laden with pork and whiskey had already touched at that port, while a third was daily expected. But now a still more inspiring object was presented to the view of the settlers, by an approaching wedding.

The universal interest which is ever excited by such an event—the eager curiosity, which would fain inspect every arrangement, and scan, if it were possible, the thoughts and intents of the candidates for the hymenial altar, and the gossiping tongue which decides upon the relative merits of the parties, and their power of rendering each other happy, were never more apparent, than they were in Tarentum, at the time to which we were referred.

It was a mild and beautiful evening in the month of September. The broad prairie was smiling in the golden rays of the setting sun, as a youthful pair were seen to bend their steps toward a shaded mound, which rose at a short distance from the village.

"There they go!" exclaimed one; "well, I never thought Clara Menard would marry him! She don't know her own mind two minutes at a time."

"Well," replied another, "and I like that! Poor creature for game, if you always follow one track, James is a good fellow, but then he's so contumacious!"

"Yes, yes—he's too sober for her, and it's nothing but his book learning that's caught her. There's half a dozen she's shipped, more to her liking, if only they had her learning; and there's the pedlar, that she's been trading with off and on for these three weeks."

"Oh, yes! he's just the one to suit her, but he'll be off and so will Jim, for that matter."

"No," replied the other, "Jim has promised to locate—to give up hunting and trapping and to take to raising."

James Arnot was not a general favorite in the village. That he was superior to most of the inhabitants, was admitted by all; yet they could have borne with that, had it not induced him to shun the low spirits, and noisy merriment, in which they indulged. This acquired, if not natural superiority, together with the adventurous life he had led, had imparted a degree of sternness to his character; and as he was nearly ten years the senior of Clara Menard, all who knew her were slow to believe that she had pledged him her heart and hand. She had done so, however, in spite of the oft repeated remonstrances of her brother, who was openly averse to the union. Clara Menard, a gay, thoughtless, fickle girl, of seventeen, was the spoiled child of a widowed and indulgent mother. As she passed along, upon the evening to which we have referred, many were the discussions which were held with regard to her fitness for the scenes on which she was the next day to enter.

"Why do you enter from me, Clara?" inquired Arnot, as they returned to the village. During their walk, Clara had averted her face, whenever he had addressed her. Was it to escape his admiring gaze? or was it to mark the grace of his favorite bow, which accompanied them, and seemed paying his court to his future mistress? Was this the reason, or could it be that to her his words were unpleasant?

The following evening was the one fixed upon for the wedding. Long before sundown, the guests began to assemble. There were seen the fathers and mothers of the settlement, as well as a 'goodlie company' of young men and maidens.

How sorely we are at this moment tempted to give, what we should consider, an orthodox description of a bridal scene! To speak of the guests as awaiting in breathless impatience, the appearance of the bride; to describe their emotions, as arrayed in love-liness, and attended by those who are as lovely as herself, she meets their admiring gaze; and as the service proceeds, a tear steals through the long, dark lashes of her drooping lid—and must we forbear? must the pen be drawn over what we had ascribed and must the truth be told?

A preacher who was on the circuit, was expected to perform the ceremony; but as he had not yet arrived, that no time might be lost, the festivities of the scene commenced. The whiskey was tapped, and the 'pedlar' was assiduously circulating it; while the girls secretly contrasted his broad white pantaloons, and the wide, stiff ruffles of his bosom, which were fastened by so immense brooch, with the name by instructing the young people in the mysteries of—no, I am not to tell what, lest our Missourian friends accuse us of libelling the Tarentumites. We frankly confess, that the scenes we are attempting to describe, occurred in the year 1823, and since that time, the 'march of mind' has undoubtedly been 'onward,' as well as to the 'right' and 'left,' through all the streets of Tarentum. But to return to the 'master'—who was quite eclipsed, and whose plain black suit seemed thrown in a still darker shade, by the dashing and knowing pedlar, while Clara, arrayed in the gayest of calico which his boxes of the latter could furnish, mingled in the merry throng, and was the life and the spirit of the scene.

At length the preacher arrived, and commenced the ceremony, or rather an introductory harangue on matrimonial duties. As he proceeded it became evident that the bride was very much moved, and the speaker fancying he had trespassed on what he considered forbidden ground, abruptly ceased his discourse, and raised his voice in prayer—Clara's sobb now redoubled; and at the close of the prayer, he paused before proceeding with the ceremony, that she might regain her composure.

"What's the matter, Clara?" inquired her mother, and the looks of all present seemed to repeat the question. "What's the matter?" repeated her mother.

"Oh! I can't!" sobbed Clara.

"Can't marry him?" she replied at the same time receding from Arnot with a true theatrical start.

All, of course, was now confusion, and all, save Arnot, joined their remonstrances. He had yielded his place, and now stood apart, calmly contemplating the scene; though a skillful observer might have discovered the waves of passion, which swelled furiously underneath this calm surface.

It was, at length, discovered from her own confession, that there was one in the company whom she could marry without shedding tears. It was not a favored one among the youth of Tarentum, nor was it our friend 'the master,' who described to us the scene, but it was—the pedlar.

Upon his being informed of the happiness in reserve for him, he frankly confessed that he was ready if she was, and on his taking the station which Arnot had vacated, the marriage ceremony was performed. As it was pronounced complete, Arnot was seen to leave the place where he had remained standing, many an apprehensive glance was cast at the pedlar, and one or two rushed forward as if to see that there was fair play.

"Don't think I'll touch him!" muttered Arnot, as with a hurried step he left the scene.

Arnot believed the whole to have been planned by the brother of Clara, and he, that very evening addressed to him a challenge, demanding instant satisfaction. The challenge was accepted, the seconds and weapons named, while the time fixed upon by the challenged party was removed from that evening, by a period of precisely ten years.

It is not our purpose to follow the course of the parties during that interval. Clara's husband had confined his peddling route to the country in which Tarentum was situated, and in general, his bearing toward her was that of kindness. Clara's character gradually strengthened, or rather it may be said, she, by degrees, acquired. Often did she reflect bitterly upon the past; and often did she shrink with horror, as she contemplated the close of the ten years, which were rapidly passing away. She had never met Arnot since the night of her marriage but she knew him to be one

"In his own heart secure, Of all that he would do or would secure. He had left Tarentum immediately after the scenes occurred, which we have related, and had fixed his head quarters at St. Louis; from thence he had gone on several expeditions up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and had ever returned richly laden with furs and peltry."

The year 1833 found him connected with a company, who were extensively engaged in the fur trade, and had charge of the depot at St. Louis.

It was at the close of a sultry day in August, that a horseman was seen, spurring the noble animal on which he was mounted, across the prairie near the village of Tarentum. He was soon recognized as James Arnot. Who could scan the motives which had so often induced him to seek that place?

Did his heart yet retain a fondness for Clara? Had he come to assure himself of her welfare? Or was it to nourish their long-sustained sense of wrong, and his deep enduring purpose of vengeance?

evening which Clara had so long viewed with dread and apprehension, and on that hour, she became, in the presence of a few witnesses, the 'wedded wife' of James Arnot.

A Capital Incident.
The Williamsburg Times relates an incident narrated by Dr. Whiting in one of his lectures in that city, in which he stated that in one of the eastern cities, he was visited by a lady who was in the greatest distress of mind from a circumstance which she learned upon consulting a spiritual knocker. 'He told me,' said she, 'that my liver had fallen below my diaphragm.'

"Indeed," said the doctor, preserving a grave countenance, 'Did he say how far down it had fallen?'

"Yes; about four inches."

"Did he think you could ever get it up again?'

"He did not give me much encouragement," replied the lady, 'but what is your opinion of it, Doctor?' she inquired.

"Well, ma'am, it has got down pretty low but so long as there is life there, hope—nothing like trying. Perhaps if you come and hear my next lecture, and learn where the liver is, you will be able to suggest some way yourself of getting it up."

The lady did attend the lecture, and took a seat in front. The doctor commenced his discourse by stating that the diaphragm was on top of the liver, and that it was therefore impossible for the liver to fall below the diaphragm. The lady hearing this dropped her eyes, and never took a front seat again. This incident was narrated to illustrate the importance of knowing something of the physical construction of our bodies, and to show that spiritual knockers were sometimes mistaken.

The Doctor, when lecturing at the Brooklyn Institute, had described the manner in which persons destroy their stomachs, and produce indigestion and dyspepsia. A gentleman sits down to his dinner, and partakes of a multitude of dishes, each seemingly prepared for the purpose of coaxing the stomach to accept more than it can digest. Being completely loaded, it sets to work to agitate the heap, and put it through the process of digestion. The gentleman starts from home, and sees some seductive-looking apples on a stand, which he thinks he should like to eat. He purchases a few of them and commences to gulp them down. 'Halloo!' says the stomach, looking up in alarm, 'what are you about up there? I have more work than I can attend to already.' However, remembrance is in vain, and with a gripe or two, the stomach goes to work as before. The gentleman next meets a friend; a glass of wine, a brandy smash, or some other liquid compound is gulped down, aided by some tobacco fumes. Supper is lowered into the stomach, like a bale of cotton into the hold of a Mississippi steamer, until the organ, wearied and overburdened, gives up in disgust, and leaves the mass to indigestion and dyspepsia, and its train of accompanying evils. Thus the harmony of the system is destroyed, which might have been prevented by a little prudence and self-denial.

ON BOARD FOR A HOLIDAY.—There was on board ship a small, active, good-natured boy, about ten or twelve years old, who, if ubiquity ever fell to the lot of mortal form, possessed that property. He was everywhere, doing everything for everybody, and apparently in at least three places at the same time.

"Dick! take Mr. Smith's coat water."

"Dick! Mr. Jones wants his coat brushed."

"Dick! bring a light in the cabin."

"Dick! go and wash the deck."

"Dick! peel them taters for cock."

"Dick! you lazy scoundrel! Seward says you've not cleaned his knives."

"Dick! go and wash the sheep." (A whole flock formed part of the cargo.)
"Dick! go and help reef topsails."
"Dick! feed the geese."
"Dick! take these bones to my dog."
The cry of Dick, Dick, Dick, resounded all the day long, and poor Dick seemed really to execute all the multifarious orders given him, with the most unflinching alacrity and good humor. One day Mr. Meredith inquired of the owner, if Dick was an apprentice in the ship.

A POINTED SERMON.—Many a discourse of an hour's length is not half as impressive as the following from an eccentric English divine:

"Be sober, grave, temperate."—Titus ii. 9.

1. There are three companions with whom you should always keep on good terms.
2. Your wife.
3. Your stomach.
4. Your conscience.

5. If you wish to enjoy peace, long life, and happiness, preserve them by temperance. Temperance produces:
1. Domestic misery.
2. Premature death.
3. Infidelity.

To make these points clear, I refer you to:
1. To the Newgate Calendar.
2. To the hospitals, lunatic asylums, and work-houses.
3. To the past experience of what you have seen, read and suffered, in mind, body and estate.

Hearer, decide! which will you choose?—Temperance, with happiness and long life; or intemperance, with misery and premature death?

Frogs are your real sober independent water-drinking freemen. A frog is a cold water man especially. He never wets his whistle with grog. He is a squatter, and appropriates all the land he can set on, or water to swim in. He never tattles about his neighbors. His hopes are altogether more natural than those in high life. He never seeks office and has no trouble about the Presidency. He swims in his own puddle, and gives free concerts for the season. His language is largely developed, and he is a speaker from the start. He never shaves money or banks notes to pay. He publishes no paper for those who never—ahem! the frog is not an editor. There is but one thing against him. He can hop, swim or crawl. This is against him, for it is very much like modern politicians. All in all, the frog is a gentleman, but has a hereditary hate of snakes, and long billed birds of prey.

A SICK BACHELOR.—The New York Times thus heads a long article on this subject.

"Sick bachelor! A dying camel in the desert! A sailor on a hen coop in the middle of the Atlantic! All the same. The same incident from different points of view. The same subject with varied accessories. If there is a preponderance of misery on either side it is on the side of the sick bachelor. The camel, however intelligent it may be, is still scarcely as sensitive as the human sufferer, and the sailor on a hen-coop a thousand miles from shore is at least spared the misery of knowing that there is help within call. The sick bachelor is the ne plus ultra of human misery."

M. Seely's Patent Distilling
Lard and Oil Burner.
THIS is an entirely new and novel Lamp, combining the following advantages:
Any kind of COMMON GREASE may be used in it, the distiller making Pure Oil out of such grease. Pure boiling oil is sent to the flame, which makes the burner give a far better light than with oil partially warmed. A wick two inches long will last a month. They rarely need snuffing, because the oil being sent to the flame at pleasure, the wick is constantly full of hot oil. They save 33 per cent. of the expense and give a better light with a wick of the same size, than any Lamp or Oil Lamp now in use. They hold lard and oil enough to last a week; hence they require filling but once a week. As the weight of the oil is at the bottom, and the top being light, they are not easily upset, and should they be, little or no grease will spill. And, lastly, they are neat, cheap and durable. Christian's majority, 58

Close of the Volume.

With this number closes the 10th volume of our paper. We design, as early as possible after the commencement of our next volume, to make some additions to our office, in order to enable us to publish our paper on new and rather smaller type, that our quantity of reading matter may be largely increased. We desire to make the Tribune not only one of the most readable, but one of the handsomest papers in the State—and we hope our friends will make an effort to increase our subscription list sufficiently to cover at least a portion of the addition which will be made to our expenses by our improvements. Let each one of our present patrons endeavor to get us one new subscriber, which every one can certainly do, (and some a great deal more,) and our list will be thus increased to twice its present size, with very little trouble, and we thereby enabled to give our readers a much larger and much handsomer paper. We hope each one of our patrons will try the experiment.

Who will send us the first list of new subscribers?

The August Term of the Boyle Circuit Court commenced on Monday last—Hon. J. L. DENNIS, presiding.

ELECTION RETURNS.—We are indebted to Messrs. JOEL SWENNET, of Casey, J. Q. A. KING, of Cumberland, C. CARTER, of Lincoln, A. HERRICK, of Taylor, W. S. PATTERSON, of Russell, and J. L. SALLER, of Wayne, for election returns from their respective counties.

The majority of Gabriel, Whig, over Armstrong, Dem., for the Legislature in Mercer county is 127. The vote stood—Gabriel 800, Armstrong 773.

Congressional.—The delegation in Congress from this State will next session as it did last—5 Whigs and 5 Democrats. Preston, Grov, Ewing, Cox, and Hall, Whigs—Beckridge, E. Hunt, Boyd, Stanton and Christian, Democrats.

We have the full official returns from six districts except the 5th, 7th, 8th and 10th, which we publish in another column.

Grey's majority in the 21st district is 336, with two counties to hear from, which will swell it to 1,000.

The reported majority for Cox in the 9th, is 610.

We will continue to publish the official returns from each district as they are received.

Such of our readers as desire to purchase Saddles, Harness, Trunks, Hardware, &c., either at wholesale or retail, will find the stock of J. B. AKIN, Esq., embracing everything they may need at that line. The establishment is under the charge of "Uncle Jimmy Wilson," a good, faithful and honest workman.

We understand that this house did a large wholesale business on Monday last, and as we like to see wholesale establishments of every kind built up in our town, we hope Mr. Akin will be well sustained. See advertisement.

It is said that the Whig Central Committee of the Ashland District, in view of the alleged large number of illegal votes cast in that district at the late election, intend to institute a thorough investigation of the matter.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance, of the State of Kentucky, met at Russellville, a few days ago. One hundred and forty odd delegates were in attendance. The Herald says it was a harmonious and pleasant session, and will doubtless result in much good to the order. The reports from all parts of the State were of the most cheering character. During the past quarter a large number of new Divisions have been organized, while only three have ceased to work.

Col. Bramlette Defeated.

The Whigs of this Congressional district have again permitted a Democrat to be chosen to represent them in Congress. Major Christian is elected by a small majority, but small as it is, it is quite sufficient to make every Whig in the district, and especially those who either neglected or refused to vote for Col. Bramlette, feel mortified at the result. We expected that Col. B. would be elected, but we feared for some time previous to the election, that his friends were too confident of success, thinking it superfluous to make an effort in his behalf—while the Democrats, silent, though industrious, were engaged in preparation for the struggle. Besides, during a few days preceding the election, when too late for him to follow them up and refute them, it was falsely charged upon Col. Bramlette, in portions of the district where it was believed such reports would work against his success, that he was an advocate of the Maine Liquor Law, and in one place we believe it was said that he was a Baptist preacher. These charges, though they should have been regarded as proofs of his worth, were causes of his defeat. He is, or has been, we learn, a Son of Temperance, but is opposed to the coercion, and disagreed with the Sons on this point. He is also a member of the Baptist church—though not a preacher, we believe—but, we will ask, should such things have operated to his prejudice? Are not sober, moral, religious men, the ones to make the laws for a free and religious people? Has not the Congress of the United States already become notorious for the debauchery of its members, and is it not time that such a stain, such a curse on our nation, was wiped away? We think it is, and every good citizen will agree with us. While we regret Col. Bramlette's defeat, therefore, we rejoice that no charge could be raised to defeat him, except that he was a temperate man and a Christian; and we deplore the fact that there are members of the Whig party who will vote against their principles, simply because their candidate is such a man.

In Cumberland and Clinton counties, where two Whigs were candidates for the Legislature, a jealousy was got up between the two counties, about the location of the Railroad—which should have been. This raised a high excitement as to which county should send the Representative, and at 12 o'clock, on the day of the election, both candidates being about together, Col. Bramlette was most shamefully "swapped off," and this traffic in principles was, we learn, continued until the close of the polls.

But, it is useless to assign more reasons for our defeat. The Whigs of the 4th district have permitted their banner to trail in the dust, and that too when a true, talented and worthy man of their party was endeavoring to hold it aloft in triumph. Col. Bramlette was in every way worthy of the undivided support of his party, and well fitted for the office for which he was a candidate. He came on the track at the solicitation and earnest desire of his friends, and now retires again to private life, a true Whig, a sterling patriot and an honest man, enjoying the respect, confidence and esteem of all who know him. To the Whig party and not to him belongs the shame of his defeat.

We deem it but justice to Major Christian to state, that so far as we have heard, he never, publicly, at least, made any attempt to create capital for himself by repeating the charges we have mentioned, against Col. B. Some of his ardent supporters, however, were none the less industrious in circulating them to that account.

Heaven forbid, that we shall ever again, in this district, at least, have to record the fact that a man was deserted by a portion of his friends, because it was charged by his enemies that he was a temperate and religious man!

WHIG TRIUMPH IN ST. LOUIS.—At the election Monday week, in St. Louis city and county, for Judicial officers, the Whigs carried everything. Out of eight gentlemen elected to office, six were Whigs. We think that it is very evident there is a Whig party still among the things that are.

TENNESSEE ELECTIONS.—In 25 counties the Democrats claim a net gain of 1,000. The Whigs admit the loss of 200 only. The result for Governor is doubtful. The Whigs have gained one Congressman as far as heard from.

ALABAMA.—The returns from Alabama leave no doubt of the election of John A. Winston, Democrat as Governor. In the second Congressional district, James Abernethy, Whig is supposed to be re-elected.

VERMONT.—The election takes place on the 6th of September. The Whigs have nominated the present Chief Magistrate, Gov. Fairbanks; the Pierce Democracy, John S. R. Mason; the Free Democracy, Hon. Lawrence Rainier.

YELLOW FEVER IN NEW ORLEANS.—A despatch from Baltimore, says: "Deaths of yellow fever at New Orleans for the week ending the 1st, 669. There has been a few cases of unmistakable yellow fever at Mobile."

NASHVILLE AND CINCINNATI RAILROAD.

The county of Barren, at the recent election, voted $300,000 to the Cincinnati and Nashville Railroad Company. The question was carried by a majority of 670 of the votes cast, a clear majority of all the votes of the county, as contained in the assessor's book.

This subscription by Barren, it is believed, secures the road. The company now has over $600,000 subscribed to its capital stock, and if Marion and Boyle counties and the city of Cincinnati do their duty, the capital stock subscribed will be increased to about a million and a quarter, which, with what will be done south of Glasgow and Tennessee, must give the company a large basis for the construction of this great work. The thanks of the country are due to THOS. L. BRANSFORD, Esq., the able and indefatigable President of the company, for his exertions in behalf of the road. We feel the fullest confidence that Mr. Bransford will yet secure the construction and completion of this great and desirable thoroughfare of trade and travel. We heartily wish the enterprise good speed.

We are more than gratified at the election of our young friend and former townsmen, R. R. RODES, Esq., in the county of Warren. It was truly a source of gratification to us to see the staunch Whig county of Warren stand true to her colors, in these times of defection and division, but our gratification was increased the more, by the return of Mr. Rodes to the Assembly as her Representative. We know Mr. R. well, and feel the fullest confidence that he will do no discredit to old Warren, though he has had able predecessors. Mr. Rodes is an educated gentleman and a man of ability. He is a graduate of our College as we believe his competitor, Mr. Sharp, is also. But he is a Whig, good and true, and his constituency will have no cause to regret his election. The interest of the county and party will be safe in his keeping as their Representative.

The triumph of Mr. R. over the combined influences of the Temperance and Locofoco parties in the county, must be a source of satisfaction to him and all true Whigs. We trust that the rebuke given in Warren and other counties at the recent election to the introduction of Temperance into politics will prevent any future efforts of a similar character. We cannot believe the introduction of temperance into party politics, will result in anything but harm to the country. While we earnestly desire the success and universal prevalence of temperance principles and practices, we do not believe it can be attained by political party agitation.

MISSOURI.—The latest intelligence claims the election of Lindsey, Whig, in the Third District. Assuming such to be the case, the delegation from Missouri in the next Congress will stand:

In the Senate—one Whig and one Democrat, Geyer and Atchinson.

In the House—four Whigs, Miller, Oliver, Caruthers and Lindsey—two Democrats, Phelps and Lamb, and one Benton man, Benton himself.

NORTH CAROLINA.—In the third district, Ashe, (Dem.) is elected; in the second district, Ruffin, (Dem.) is also elected; in the fourth district, Rogers (Whig) is elected by 67 majority over Venable and Lewis, Democrats. This is a Whig gain. Nothing reliable from the other districts.

The railroad debts of certain cities gives the following amount to each inhabitant: Philadelphia, $20; Poughkeepsie, $34; Wheeling, $55; Baltimore, $34; St. Louis and county, $50; Cincinnati, $7; Louisville, $25; New Orleans, $28; Covington, $7; Marietta, $20; Milwaukee, $20. This gives a pretty good idea of the extent to which subscriptions to railroads have been carried.

DO IT IF YOU DARE.—The Louisville Courier, says the Locos, in their exultations over Breckinridge's election, are already nominating him for Speaker of the House of Representatives, Governor of Kentucky, and President of the United States. The Times threatens that if the next Legislature throws Owen county out of the Ashland district, the Democrats will, for spite, nominate Breckinridge for Governor. Let them try that game if they dare, and we rather guess they will find how quick they can get their young champion used up. We have a gentleman in this city, who would not leave so much as a grain of soil of Mr. Breckinridge after one gubernatorial canvass. Let John C. Breckinridge be nominated by all means, and we venture to say that after he comes out of a contest with Wm. Preston, his friends will not think him half so great a man as they seem to esteem him now. Let them bring him out if they dare. Colonel Preston will soon make him find his proper level.

SERIOUS AFFRAY.—A serious difficulty occurred at Elizabethtown on Monday week, between Dr. Young, former Congressman, and Thos. Brown, late county clerk. Brown attempted to use violence towards Dr. Young, and was afterwards shot through the thighs by the Doctor. A son of Brown's then shot at Dr. Young, but missed him.

THE FISHERY QUESTION—BRITISH DEMANDS.

A correspondent of the N. York Express says that the British government has put forward the following demands as the conditions for the settlement of the fishery question:

- 1st. The admission of British hulkers to the privilege of American register.
- 2d. The free admission between the American, Atlantic, and Pacific ports.
- 3d. The abolition of our present duties to the American cod fishery.
- 4th. A further modification of our tariff—of course with a view to favor British interests.
- 5th. The original demand of reciprocity of trade with the North American colonies.

These demands, if correctly stated, are too unreasonable to secure even the respectful consideration of Congress, and have already put a close to the negotiations that were in progress.

OCEAN STEAMERS—A RACE.—The Cunard Steamer Arabia, on her Easterly voyage, is said to have made the quickest trip on record, to Liverpool. Her friends claim that she has beaten the time of the Collins' Steamer Arctic, sixteen minutes in a distance of over 3,000 miles.

On the other hand the representatives and personal friends of the Collins line insist that the alleged triumph is no triumph at all; that an exact calculation of the times and distances of the two competitors still leaves the Arctic the victor by exactly ten minutes.

Col. Benton not only has found the best and the most proper route for the Pacific road, but even the pedestal for his promised statue of Columbus has come to light. Lieut. Beale writes, that in his explorations west, he has come across the Huernano Butte, a curious conical, sugar-buff in shape, of solid rock and about three hundred feet in height. Whereupon Col. Benton exclaims, enthusiastically, "but that Huernano Butte solid rock, three hundred feet high, sugar-buff form, visible twelve miles; that column built by the hands of nature to receive statue of Columbus pointing to the west and saying to the magic car as it flies long, 'That is the road to India!'"

A SINGULAR FACT.—A marriage solemnized in South Carolina is indissoluble, either by consent of parties, or by the judgment of any foreign tribunal or by sentence of any foreign legislature. No judicial tribunal in South Carolina has any authority to declare a divorce, and no divorce has ever been granted by the Legislature of South Carolina.

The director of the mint has issued a circular inviting artists, engravers, and other persons of taste, to aid him in getting up appropriate devices for the silver coinage. Those favorably disposed are requested to forward their suggestions to the Philadelphia mint before the first day of October next.

MURDER.—The Franklin Commonwealth says that the body of Peter Yeager, residing near Versailles, was found in his pasture on Sunday week. He had evidently been murdered, having received two shots, and been blown over the head with a club. The evidence adduced before the Coroner's inquest tended strongly to show that he had been murdered, about 10 o'clock on Saturday, by three of his slaves who were at work in a field near at hand. A fourth negro who was at work in the same or a joining field testified that he missed them from their work—that he heard two shots—and soon afterwards saw them coming from the direction in which the body was found. The accused negroes are in jail awaiting trial.

THE ASHLAND DISTRICT.—We have no kind of doubt that Mr. John C. Breckinridge was elected to Congress on the 1st inst., by spurious votes and that the fact can be fully established. Undoubtedly, several hundreds of vile wretches were taken to that district and scattered all over it on the eve of the election, hired to vote for the Democratic candidate. It must have been so, for as the Franklin Commonwealth states, the votes given in one county where Breckinridge carried all before him, exceed by several hundred the number of free white males over twenty years of age in the county. The following is from the Commonwealth:

In a day or two, when our information is more complete, we will go into a scrutiny of the extraordinary Democratic majority in this district. In the mean time we remark that every Whig with whom we have conversed ascribes the defeat of Gov. Leitch to fraudulent and illegal votes. In one county, at least, it can be shown that the votes given exceed by several hundred the number of free white males over 21 years of age in the county! Gov. Leitch received the full strength of his party—several hundred more than Gen. Scott, who carried the district by 626—and if the polls were purged to-day we fully believe that Leitch and not Breckinridge would be the Congressman elect.

PUBLIC SALE

and Negroes, Stock, Crop, &c.
WISHING to remove to the west, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, On Tuesday, the 4th of October, 1853,
1st. A TRACT OF LAND
On which I now live, situated in Garrard county, near the Forks of the turnpike, 7 miles from Davieville, 7 from Lancaster, and 2 from Bryantville, and adjoining the lands of Huskins, Adams, Root, &c. containing 713 Acres of first rate Land.
Under good fencing, well improved, having two good residences and Out-houses, and a full supply of Timber and never-failing Water. The Farm is in a good state of cultivation, being about 50 acres in Grain, the balance in Grass, and could be easily divided into Two Farms, if necessary. It is believed that there is not a more desirable Farm in the county, nor one possessing more advantages of soil, locality and good neighborhood than this, and persons wishing to buy are invited to call and examine it for themselves.
Also, at the same time,
14 Likely Negroes,
Consisting of 2 M & 8 B y, 1 Woman, and 3 Children.
Also, the Stock on the Farm,
To-wit: Cattle, Horses, Hogs, &c.
The Growing Crop.

Which they offer to persons who buy to sell again, at about Louisville prices with carriage added, and to retail purchasers at proportionately low prices. Also,
CAKES,
Of every description, and of superior quality; FRUITS, Fresh and Preserved; NUTS—Almonds, Filberts, Pecans, Cream Nuts and English Walnuts; TOYS and FANCY ARTICLES, together with a good stock of Family Groceries.
As we are determined to sell at Small Profits, persons desiring to purchase anything in our line will do well to give us a call, and at least learn our prices before buying elsewhere.

FAYETTE FARM.

Stock, Crop, &c.,
At Public Sale.
I WILL sell at public sale, to the highest bidder, positively, WITHIN 10 DAYS, on Thursday, the 22d of September, 1853, THE FARM on which I reside, in the county of Fayette, 7 miles from Lexington, on the Versailles Turnpike, containing about
375 ACRES
Of first-rate Land, in a high state of cultivation, well watered and timbered. The improvements are valuable, there being upon the place a large and well arranged Dwelling, Negro House, Barn, Stables, large Mule Shed, Ice House, and one of the best Spring houses in the country. There is also every variety of the most choice Fruit upon the place. The land is of excellent quality, and produces well as any land in the neighborhood. On the whole it is one of the most desirable farms now offered to the public. I have here before me a fourth of the land for sale, but am now determined to sell without reserve to the highest bidder.
